Yup! We're not beaten yet! And we're thrilled that you have taken time out of your busy schedule of playing Zelda and complaining that the latest franchise reboot is destroying your childhood to join us for a weekend of music and abject silliness. And believe me, we have plenty of both lined up for this weekend. So settle in and enjoy!

Performing Artists

Peter Wildman - Peter Wildman was a founding member of The Frantics and was identified as the musical one. As such, he penned all the songs for The Frantics. These days, with The Frantics in semi-retirement, Peter performs his one man act “One Funny Song After Another”—a hilarious evening of songs culled from the Frantics’ songbook.

Worm Quartet - Worm Quartet is a one-man-synth-punk-comedy-group from Rochester, New York whose sole member is a 6’ 4” maniac who goes by the name “Shoebox.” Their music is fast, furious, and funny, and they were the number 1 artist on Dr. Demento in 2004 with the ex-girlfriend ode “Great Idea for a Song.”

Movie Screenings

Punching Henry - Winner of the Audience Award at the Slamdance Film Festival, this realistic comedy tells the story of Henry Phillips, a hapless modern day troubadour who grinds his way through the heartland, living out of his car and singing his twisted satirical songs to anyone who will listen. After a booking mishap involving a Christian fund raiser, he decides he’s hit rock bottom. Seeking to shake things up, he moves to L.A. where his luck changes overnight thanks to a wild case of mistaken identity. This is the sequel to Henry’s first film, 2009’s Punching the Clown.
